RE: Albion Power Company and Multi-Unit Affordable Housing

My name is Ingrid Jacobson and I am the Housing and Solar Project Manager at the Northern California Land Trust. I am writing this letter in appreciation of Albion Power Company's diligence on NCLT's multi-unit affordable housing complex located at the Noodle Factory; 1225 26th Street in Oakland.

Albion's monolithic solar array aesthetically covers our roof and is proficiently wired to serve each of our building's residential and commercial units. The company's electricians and roofers provided high quality workmanship and we are pleased with the result.

Albion Power Company's management also provided significant exchanges with the City of Oakland and PG&E to expedite our project. This was indispensable in meeting critical financing, rebate, and utility interconnection deadlines.

The expansion of solar on multi-family homes is crucial for increasing the amount of renewable energy used in our society. The impact of climate change will be felt most by our poorest communities. We have to find any and every opportunity to give people the incentive to stop relying on fossil fuels and begin using renewable energy in order to slow the effects of climate change. The most vulnerable communities benefit from every new solar installation, all the better if residents can benefit directly from clean energy sources on their building.

Albion Power Company is a professional, diligent and cooperative partner, any project would gain value from having their expertise on their team. Please do not hesitate to call me to talk further.

Thank you for your time,
